LARGE AUDIENCE IN ATTENDANCE AT COULSON LECTURE

Miss Lucia C. Coulson, C. S., of London, England, a member of the Christian Science Board of Lecturers, delivered a lecture entitled, "Christian Science, The Union of Reason and Revelation" Friday evening, under the auspices of First Church of Christ, Scientist, Richmond, in Roosevelt Auditorium.

The lecturer was introduced by Mrs. Jessie Krumick, who said: On behalf of First Church of Christ Scientist of Richmond, I welcome you.

Jesus, at the well of Sychar, said to the woman of Samaria, "If thou knowest the gift of God, and who it is that saith to thee, Give me to drink; thou wouldest have asked of him, and he would have given thee living water." Our beloved leader, Mary Baker Eddy, in one of her beautiful poems, has said, "Come to this fountain, cleanse the foul senses within; 'Tis the Spirit that makes pure; That exalts thee, and will cure All thy sorrow and sickness and sin."

We who are studying Christian Science are firmly convinced that it is the well of living water, and we lovingly invite you to share some of these truths with us this evening.

It gives me great pleasure to present Miss Lucia C. Coulson, C. S., a member of the Board of Lecturers of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts, who will now address you.

Miss Coulson spoke as follows: I have taken for the subject of this lecture Christian Science, the Union of Reason and Revelation. It is a surprise to many people to be told that reason is a factor in the study of true religion, but on the first page of the Christian Science textbook by Mary Baker Eddy these words occur, "The time for thinkers has come," and it is certain that people are thinking today as they never thought before. Even physical science which previously dealt entirely with matter and material phenomena is recognizing mind more and more, although it does not make the distinction so clearly drawn by Christian Science between the divine Mind and the so-called human mind.

The following interesting statement was made a short time ago by Professor J. A. Fleming of the University of London, "The physical universe is a thought rather than a thing, and thought implies and necessitates a thinker." Physical science, therefore, is gradually approaching the standpoint of Christian Science: namely, that all is Mind, and that Mind alone creates, governs, originates; that all cause is mental and therefore effect is mental, and amenable to Mind; that the universe itself is a "thought rather than a thing." Let us see where this will lead us and what it will bestow upon us. It leads us to discover where lies the mastery of circumstances and the power to heal and prevent disease. It frees us from the limitations with which the belief in matter and material thinking has bound us, and from which we have not known how to escape. Perhaps it is this helplessness, this inability of mankind to overcome or avoid calamity, that makes its heaviest burden. There is no one so happy that he would not like to be able to protect and so ensure that happiness.

Now this helplessness is due to the belief that man is matter, that his troubles are material, and that he has no control over them. Once take the position that all is Mind, that the universe and all it includes is the product of Mind, and immediately the remedy appears. For if a thought is the cause of the trouble, then a change of thought can alter it. If a thought causes this or that condition, then an opposite thought will change the given condition. Now we have all been given the power to think, and we can already believe that we can or should control our thoughts. Therefore, if everything is in the first instance a thing of thought, and we can all think, how much control should we have, how much dominion over this earth? And what is the nature of this dominion? It is evident, reasoning from this standpoint, that Mind controls and governs all, and man, the outcome of Mind, possesses this dominion. Remember the gift of dominion was recorded many thousands of years ago in a book we have most of us been taught to revere. Let me read you verses twenty-six to twenty-eight of the first chapter of Genesis. "And God said, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness; and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth. . . . And God blessed them, and God said unto them, Be fruitful, and multiply, and replenish the earth, and subdue it: and have dominion."

Did it ever occur to you that these are not mere words, but practical, provable truth? I remember reading that when I first began the study of Christian Science, and as I read the general concept of man flashed before me: man at the mercy of chance, of circumstance, of disease, of loss; man happy to-day, and crushed to-morrow; pitifully weak, and unable to protect himself. Then I turned to this book, Science and Health, which I had been told was a Key to the Scriptures, and there I read (p. 517): "Man is not made to till the soil. His birthright is dominion, not subjection. He is lord of the earth and heaven, himself subordinate alone to his Maker." I read on until I began to see how it was possible to prove this dominion to be true, now. I could never tell you what a flood of light and liberty filled my heart as I read—what possibilities opened out to me—what a promise Christian Science set before me. And it has kept its promise! My friends, what is true for one is true for all, and we can all begin now to prove, gradually, and step by step, this dominion in our experience. We must gain it first in our thinking, and then necessarily in our experience, for experience is the fruit of thinking.

Now it is easy enough to see that some things are the result of thought—war, for instance. But when we come to more particular instances, such as disease, poverty, and epidemic, and so on, people are apt to say, "Do you mean to tell me these are mental and the result of wrong thinking?" Christian Science replies that they are, and that they can be healed by spiritual thinking.

Therefore evil could not enter the Mind that is infinite or eternal, and so it is the perfect thoughts of this perfect Mind that we need to obtain and entertain, in order to counteract and to heal the effects of wrong thinking. Following this out to its logical conclusion, we find that we are in a world of ideas, a thought-universe. This universe is perfect and God-created; but our concept of it is not right, is not perfect, and we shall find that our concept is corrected and transformed by the simple method of replacing wrong thoughts with right thoughts, thoughts which reflect divine Mind. Here then is the way—to learn to ally ourselves with God's thoughts. When we do that, we ally ourselves with infinite power; we enlist divine power on our behalf.

Now to do this, we must learn something of the nature of this power. What is the nature or character of infinite and omnipotent Mind? This is where the wedding of Science to Christianity takes place. That which the heart of man craves is found to be in accord with reason. It has been said that the infinite must be without an element of discord or destruction, must be wholly creative, therefore entirely forth and preserving; must therefore be that of which John conceived when he said that God is Love. Divine Love alone admits of no flaw, no friction. Intelligence or power divorced from love can manifest all that is worst, most bestial, most brutal; but find all power to be also love, and immediately its universe can be conceived of only as perfect and as altogether lovely.

How could there be an atom of suffering, of sin, or sickness permitted by the omnipotence which is altogether Love? Even humanly our concept of love stands for bliss. What is the will of Love for the beloved? Always that which the beloved desires. Now, every one of you in your true being has come forth from that infinite Love, and is the loved of Love. I don't care who you are, what your character or your race or your present limitations may be; each one of you is the beloved, and the will of the divine Love for you is all that is happening, sweetest, most blissful, all that makes for fullness, usefulness, dominion, heaven—indeed, your heart's desire!

Go into a beech wood at the magic moment of spring. Look at the moss under your feet, the exquisite vivid green of each budding leaf; see the tender beauty of the violet, the bluebell, the anemone—each tiny petal perfectly formed, each color perfectly matched! There are only the promise of heavenly beauties; but what thoughts do they stand for, of what are they the symbols? Think what qualities of tenderness and innocence, of gayety and care for every smallest detail must be comprised in the Mind which is God, and clothing as He does the lilies of the field, will He not clothe and tend and beautify and glorify you, His highest ideas?

My friends, this concept of God will do much for you. It will change and sweeten and transmute your experience. It will take away your fear. Has your experience been a hard dreary and barren existence? What concern of God you are entertaining. There are those whose concept of God is that of a Being to be dreaded, one who sits in judgment, and deals out punishment and calamity to all offenders. There are many whose concept of God is that of a schoolmaster, stern and just—God of penalties, righteous penalties, so-called, who says, "You have sinned and you must suffer." And there are some to whom God is both Father and Mother, whose idea of God is the highest, tenderest Love it is possible to conceive of or imagine, a God who lives only to bless and cannot curse, who lives only to heal and could not send or permit or know suffering, who lives only to bestow heaven, and would not know how to afflict. To this God we come and say, "We are sick, we are sick, we are weary, we are wretched," and our God makes answer, "It is none of my real, it is none of it true! It is all blotted out in the presence of infinite, universal, unquenchable Love which corrects and cancels every mistake; for Love has only love to bestow." Let this God, the only true God, rule your experience.

I spoke of the wedding of Science to Christianity in our thought when we discern the nature of infinite Mind to be Love. Consequently, when we perceive that Love and intelligence are in reality indivisible, there comes the true marriage of the male and female qualities of Mind, the divinely united spiritual consciousness, as Science and Health puts it (p. 517).

Now the highest, purest concept of Love which human experience presents is generally conceded to be that of a mother for her child; and so in order to turn our thoughts to the understanding of the Love that God, Christian Science has given us yet another and gentler name by which to address Deity, for it speaks of God as Mother.

When this thought of the Motherhood of God unfolds to us we come to see that there is no thought to be small, no desire too slight, to confide in Love's tender keeping. The little ones are Her especial care. We realize that all the comforts of home, the consolations of friendship, the fulfillment of harmless desires, the innocent joys that go to make up happy human living, are the will of Love for us now. They are the direct working out of this blessed concept of God. They are the human working out or approximation of the infinite bliss with which Love satisfies its own desire, blessing equally the infinite and the finite. Every one of you is included in the Father-Mother's perfect plan. Every one of you is needed, and indispensable therein, and Truth will show you how to appropriate this blessedness.

Now it is a fact that whatever concept of God we cherish, consciously or unconsciously, shapes and governs our models of thought and conduct; and as we gain this concept of God as Mother we shall become gentler and kinder in our thoughts and words and deeds. In proportion, then, as this idea of God unfolds in human consciousness, the whole world will become a gentler, warmer-hearted, happier dwelling-place.

I spoke just now of Love's perfect universe which is altogether lovely. Right here mortals seem to be faced with a universe which is the direct opposite, which contradicts the divine facts. What are we to do with it? Has it ever struck you that this is the very problem which is presented to us in the first and second chapters of Genesis? First, there is the account of the divine fact of perfect God and perfect man, whose universe is very good, and then comes the account of a man made of dust who immediately fell into a deep sleep. It would seem as if that sleep is still going on. In that sleep came the introduction of a dual consciousness, the knowledge of good and evil, in which evil seemed as real and natural as good. This dual consciousness is really a kingdom divided against itself, for good and evil are opposites, and it is the mingling of good and evil thoughts, with the latter much in the preponderance, that causes the friction of human existence.

In the infinite Mind, whose name is Love, there can be, as we saw, no friction by reason of its infinity. To God there is no dual consciousness. There is but one Mind, one will, one consciousness, one manner of thinking—right thinking.

Friction is caused by the rubbing or pulling of particles in two opposite directions. It is defined in the dictionary as the resistance to a body from the surface on which it moves. The problem of the theory of perpetual motion can only be solved by the elimination of all friction, the deterioration and decrease of the human body could be prevented. So far this has been found to be impossible, because this friction has been thought of as material both in cause and effect. Christian Science makes it clear that we leave the dual consciousness and declare for the one Mind which is good only and Love always, as we learn to think God's good thoughts only, in that ratio friction ceases and harmony is restored. At this point I want to say to you that this is not simply a theory. It is the most practical and provable fact that has ever been presented to you. Therein lies its whole value, and for that reason we know it to be the truth. That which is true can always be proved. That which is false can never be. You may try forever and in vain to prove twice two is five. It is not five, and when subject to proof its falsity is exposed. You may believe that twice two is five quite easily; but you cannot prove it. Any child, on the other hand, can prove twice two is four, because that is the truth.

Now Christian Science states that the power of the divine Mind to heal all human ills, the power of right thinking to change and destroy to effects of wrong thinking, has been proved time and time again in this age by healing the sick. It is this restoration of the healing works of primitive Christianity which is the hallmark of Christian Science, so to speak. In her Church Manual (p. 17) Mrs. Eddy writes that the Christian Science church is "designed to commemorate the word and works of our Master, which should reinstate primitive Christianity and its lost element of healing." She also says on page 17: "The same book that 'each member of this Church shall strive to demonstrate by his or her practice, that Christian Science heals the sick quickly and wholly, thus proving this Science to be all that we claim for it.' Now, when a sick person is made well, the ultimate object of Christian Science healing is not there; work is only begun. For the object of Christian Science is to regenerate human consciousness, to change the dual consciousness of good and evil to the consciousness of good's aloneness; to educate it out of matter into Spirit, and so to end the Adam dream. This regeneration, however, starts with the healing of physical sickness, the direct working out of this blessed concept of God. They are the human working out or approximation of the infinite bliss with which Love satisfies its own desire, blessing equally the infinite and the finite. Every one of you is included in the Father-Mother's perfect plan. Every one of you is needed, and indispensable therein, and Truth will show you how to appropriate this blessedness."

There has been such a tendency on the part of mankind to regard his works as miracles, relegated to his time alone, that people have hardly considered what he himself said on this subject. In the first place, he stated that anyone who believed in him and his teaching could do the same works he did, and greater. Then with regard to the method, he said that it was his Father who did the healing, but that the patient needed receptivity, faith, to enable him to receive. "The Father that dwelleth in me, he doeth the works." "According to your faith be it unto you."

Then, again, and this is an important point for the practitioner, in instance after instance we are told that before he healed anyone, he was moved with compassion. Many of his patients were sinners, many lepers; but no matter how great the physical or moral deformity, Jesus was moved with compassion. As he passed by, the multitudes were healed. Men told each other with bated breath, "Jesus of Nazareth passeth by." And the sick were healed. What was it that healed them? Was it his person or the shadow of his person falling on them? We in this age are too enlightened for such superstition. It was what Jesus knew, what Jesus saw in the place of sick humanity, that healed.

Let me read you here a passage from Science and Health which no one who desires to heal the sick can study too carefully: "Jesus beheld in Science the perfect man, who appeared to him where sinning mortal man appears to mortals. In this perfect man the Saviour saw God's own likeness, and this correct view of man healed the sick" (Science and Health, pp. 476, 477). So in the place of the poor weeping, sinning woman, in the place of Jesus saw the beloved, the pure idea "only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth." Now, he said that we should do the works he did. It was his clear vision, his tender compassion, his reflection of divine intelligence, that revealed the Christ, and it is for each one of us to-day to "put on Christ." Then, as we pass through the streets of our great cities and the sick and the sorrowful meet us in the press, being "moved with compassion," we shall find time to pray, not on bended knee, but by lifting up our thoughts to heaven, by declaring again and yet again that the perfect Mind has created perfect man, for from the standpoint of Christian Science we have to look through and beyond the mist of sense-testimony and discern the spiritual idea of man emanating from divine Mind. Then shall we echo the words of the poet: "O God of mountains, stars and boundless spaces, O God of freedom and of joyous hearts. When Thy face looketh forth from all men's faces There will be room enough in crowded mart! Brood Thou around me, and the noise is o'er. Thy universe my closet with shut doors." George MacDonald.

consciousness of the practitioner, and then, behold, her body straightened also! Now, farther back, I referred to the possible overcoming of an epidemic, and I should like to say something about that here. Take an epidemic of influenza. A Christian Scientist protects himself from the contagion of fear, before its results appear on his body, as he also heals those who come to him for healing from it by knowing that God, good, being omnipresent, there is only good to catch; that in the whole of infinite Mind, there is no evil influence or influence, and that, to quote Science and Health (Prof. p. xi), the "divine influence ever present in human consciousness is superior to every other influence, and this divine influence is itself a law of destruction to every other so-called evil influence."

Let us now take a case of drunkenness, or any other false appetite of the carnal mind. The Christian Scientist, turning away from the evidence of the senses, maintains the fact that God made man complete and satisfied; that his craving is only the perverted longing for the wine of inspiration, the joys of Spirit; and holding to this view of man, he declares, "Blessed are they which to hunger and thirst after righteousness: for they shall be filled."

And what if we are confronted with a case of lack. Does Christian Science offer a solution for this also? Most assuredly it does. Lack arises from the belief that supply is material, and therefore limited and finite. Christian Science declares that divine Mind is the source of all supply and, therefore, supply is infinite, and consists of ideas, right ideas. What we know constitutes our wealth; for if we know more than others on any subject, they want what we know, and will give us the necessary exchange as what it names its dignity is given. We see, then, that true commerce consists in the exchange of ideas, and how can we obtain these valuable ideas? From one source only, from infinite intelligence, which never withholds anything, but will bestow them upon us for the asking—not for half-hearted asking, however; not for a mere impulsive request. We must be earnest and persistent in our desire, in our efforts. Sometimes we need to importune the divine Mind. Mrs. Eddy has written (Christ and Christmas, p. 15): "What the Beloved knew and taught, Science repeats, Through understanding, dearly sought."

Have you sought in this manner? I have said that divine Mind never withholds, and our object is not to beseech God to give that which He refuses. God has already given all. The object of our importuning is to clear away the mist that obscures our view, and to reach the understanding of what is already ours as the expression of God's being.

This is prayer—not the beseeching of God to be good, but the fervent desire to understand how good He is. Let me hasten to add, however, that we do not add, however, that we do not add petition and prayer, and even as Jesus did in the model prayer he left us, known as the Lord's Prayer. At the same time, a treatment the Christian Scientist uses constant affirmation, because his object is not to make a sick mortal well, but to perceive God's man coming forth from infinite Mind, in the likeness of that Mind, as the Bible itself declares.

Sometimes people will come to me and say, "I don't know how to pray in Christian Science. I don't know the scientific way." To such inquirers I always say, "Pray in whatever way helps you to gain the presence of God." He is "no respecter of persons" or of forms. God does not care what words you use. He regards only the motive and the desire. Prayer should not be a laborious effort to climb up to God. We do not have to go anywhere to find God. God is Mind, and Mind is omnipresent; that means that there is only one good presence everywhere; here, now, within that he said had bound her" ("Satan," replied the woman, and a light broke over her face. "Yes," was the answer. "And may it not be that same Satan, or evil, which has bound you?" The woman's whole expression changed, and then there the Christian Scientist spoke to her of the ever-present Christ, Truth, which has come to this age as the Comforter, and which through the teachings of Christian Science is loosening those that are bound. "It can loose you too," she said. "Lift yourself up." And the woman lifted herself up and stood erect. As she listened to the explanation of the Christian Scientist her whole thought had changed. The whole belief in a punishing God, the binding belief in a punishing God who had sent this thing to chasten her yielded, and her thought was lifted up in hope and faith to respond to the great fulfilled picture of a punishing God, seated in the sky, dealing out judgment, has driven young men and women into atheism. What is the truth of the matter? What are the qualities that reign in heaven? They are the exact opposite of those that the human mind has chosen as rulers. The sword and the sceptre are the symbols of rulership to us even to-day. Kings and governors are surrounded by armed men and mounted police. The Revelator chose a lamb as the symbol of that which reigns in heaven, and he saw a woman—the feminine qualities of Mind which belong equally to all men and all women—as that which wears the crown.

In Science and Health (p. 28) we read, "Justice is the handmaid of mercy." In other words, mercy is on the throne and justice does her bidding. The greatest human rulers have shown this same quality of mercy. The story of Lincoln and the young sentry is so well known, it scarcely bears repeating, and yet we do not tire of it. A sentry was found sleeping at his post and was condemned to be shot at dawn. The death-warrant was brought to Lincoln, to sign, and he asked for the facts. He found that the boy had done a heavy march and then volunteered for duty to relieve a sick friend. He was found asleep at his post, and it was a critical place, and his general refused to spare him. The penalty of such an offense was death. Lincoln ordered them to bring the young man in. Then, speaking to him like a father, he said, "I'm going to trust you and send you back to your regiment." Thus Lincoln, the Great-hearted, made "Justice the handmaid of mercy," but no one has ever called Lincoln weak.

It is weakness which refuses to go against tradition. It is weakness which flares up as soon as what it names its dignity is slighted; weakness that resents that wants to revenge itself upon its enemies in the guise of justice. It takes strength, the strength of a hero, the strength of the Galilean, to turn the other cheek, to remain unmoved when insulted, to forgo redress, to love those whom we call our personal or our national enemies. There are few men strong enough to do this, even to-day. So, many centuries ago, in the Sermon on the Mount, these same qualities were named as the remedy for human ills by the Nazarene, and yet all through the ages they have been ignored and set aside as impossible and impracticable. Yet they are the only truly practical solution because they are in accord with Truth, with the divine facts of being. Let anyone practice loving his enemies, and as soon as he has succeeded, he will find that in loving them, he loses them—there are no enemies left. Does hating them or fighting them ever get rid of them? If you go to war and conquer them, does that lessen the emptiness on either side? It only increases it, and the day will come, and is coming, when the Sermon on the Mount will be seen to be the practical solution of war, when humanity will cease worshipping force and finesse, and will learn to exalt the qualities that reign in heaven: the Mother-Love, the gentleness and innocence of the Lamb.

These qualities were manifested in a remarkable degree by Mary Baker Eddy, as were also those of energy and intelligence. It is supremely true of her that she was a great thinker. The Discoverer of the Science of Christianity could be nothing less. It is not easy to be a pioneer in any direction, however limited the scope; but to be a pioneer in the realm of spiritual Science, and to be at the same time a woman, demanded nothing less than heroism. Essentially womanly she was, with a natural shrinking from publicity, and yet of fire within, whose message which she could not choose but utter, which overcame all natural reticence and forced her into the arena of mental conflict. From that conflict she emerged unharmed, because she was able to prove and to demonstrate that the divine Principle she preached was all she stated it to be—"equal to every emergency" (Science and Health, p. 406). I would ask you, if I may, to consider for a few minutes the wonder of this woman's life. From birth she had been delicate, and at the age of forty-five she was a frail invalid, overcome by the least exertion. At that age she made her great discovery, and it changed her from an invalid to a woman of marvelous energy and endurance. When over fifty, she brought out her first great work, "Science and Health with a Key to the Scriptures." At the same time she was healing cases of so-called chronic and incurable diseases of every description. She was teaching classes, and organizing her students into bands to go out into all the world and heal.

How we have feared the will of Love! How we have dreaded the "one altogether lovely." Even as we have reversed the whole order of heaven. The dual consciousness inevitably reverses and perverts the divine facts. The

ROBBY AGNEW, PAULINE GARON AT RICHMOND

"The College Hero," which opened at the Richmond theatre yesterday for two days showing has something about it which appeals to each individual and holds the attention until the final fade-out. This Columbia Pictures production, featuring Bobby Agnew, Pauline Garon, Ben Turpin, Rex Lease and Churchill Ross, depends for its success, more upon the human interest element than upon a strong plot. The film has for its purpose a pictorialization of college life as it exists in our American institutions and in that it succeeds admirably.

Hazing incidents, glimpses of life in the dormitory, the sorority prom, and finally the smashing, spinning football match with the tide turning against the home team, the star player disabled, the second best man out of the game and only two minutes to go, have strong appeal. At this point the temperature reaches fever heat, the hair begins to raise on ends, and just when it seems that we can't stand another particle of tension the hero rushes into the field and wins the game.

Interwoven in this fabric are designs of humor, contributed by Ben Turpin, Churchill Ross and Joan Standing; motifs of love, supplied by Bobby Agnew, Pauline Garon and Rex Lease; and a friendship between two college lads which is second to none. It is a friendship built up by hard knocks and great sacrifice, a friendship as enduring as bronze and one which will be remembered long after the picture has been erased from memory.

"The College Hero" is clean entertainment and may safely be recommended for the entire family. Other film features include the ninth chapter of "The Crimson Flash," featuring Cullen Landis; and "Felix Hits The Deck," a cartoon comedy.

the sick. Every kind of calamity, at that time, pursued her, lawsuits were brought against her, but she went on her way, undisturbed and unafraid; and finally she undertook the greatest and most arduous task of all, the founding of the Christian Science church, The Mother Church, with all its activities. No woman had ever founded a church before, far less had any woman been the inspired leader of a scientific and religious movement. In achieving this, she lifted all womanhood forever. It was her purpose that this church should endure, and that it should be the protection of her followers. Its constitution was framed by her and embodied in the Church Manual. Its periodicals were also each one of them founded and started by her, and in the midst of her labors she found time to write for them constantly. Meanwhile she was bringing out other books and organizing the Board of Lectureship. At the age of eighty-seven she moved her home from Concord, New Hampshire, to Chestnut Hill, Massachusetts, and founded a great daily international newspaper, The Christian Science Monitor. She alone conceived the idea of this paper, gave the order for its inception, and contrary to the advice of many of her students, insisted on its speedy publication. She directed, counseled, defended, and governed the great movement she herself founded. No one could take her place, though she tried hard to find someone capable of so doing. No one knew enough to do so, no one else was willing to make the sacrifice that was required, and so this "toller tireless" went on to the last week of her life on earth, laboring and achieving. She was always seeking for new ways to protect and promote the healing truth she had discovered. One who knew her well and saw her constantly said to me of her, "She was always thinking, thinking." To the last moment, her desk was the headquarters of the movement, and her authority was unchallenged, because in all she did she turned to God alone for guidance, and listened for His voice.

I submit to you that her life was one of continuous achievement, and that she has left this inspiring example to her followers.

In summing up them we find Christian Science to be the union of reason and revelation. It satisfies both the intellect and the affections; it reconciles science and religion; it shows cause and effect to be mental, and thus gives us the key to dominion; but above all, it shows us that we must learn to love, and in loving find ourselves to be the beloved. Such love is greater than mere human affection. To like one and dislike another is personal sense. Love is that which includes all in its embrace, in whose light every object is transfigured. Let us labor to obtain this vision. In the words of the beloved disciple, "Let us love one another: for love is of God; and every one that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God. He that loveth not knoweth not God; for God is love."

BERRY-HATTON IN LAUGH RIOT AT CALIFORNIA

Having been soldiers, sailors, firemen and aviators, all with hilarious results, Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton have become mountain climbers, and Swiss yodelers.

In the new characterizations, in which they are seen at the California Theatre, their antics are of the same laughable quality that endeared them to the public in "Behind the Front," "We're in the Navy Now," "Firemen, Save My Child," "Now We're in the Air."

As in the case of all good comedies, the plot is simple. Beery and Hatton are first seen as waiters in a Brooklyn restaurant, Beery as the head waiter and Hatton as the plain, garden style of waiter. War reverses their situations. Beery is a private buck in the rear rank and on kitchen police and Hatton is a second lieutenant.

The war sequence opens at the armistice, with the soldiers rushing for home, but Beery is left behind, detailed by Lieutenant Hatton to look after the future Mrs. Hatton. Beery looks after her by marrying her, after he has obtained a job as an Alpine guide and Swiss yodeler.

His yodel, which can hardly be registered by the lighter makes of yodel meters, wins him a lusty fame and distinction, but his bride wins him only grief and complications. There are snowslides, landslides, blizzards; everything peculiar to the Alps, including the inkeeper and the dogs that search out lost climbers with a keg of wine on their necks, is merrily kidded.

"Wife Savers" is a whirlwind comedy that accelerates from two to fifty laughs a minute in the first 100 feet. It should be seen by anyone strong enough to laugh constantly for approximately one hour.

A strong supporting cast has been assembled for the stars. It includes Ford Sterling, Zasu Pitts, Tom Kennedy, August Loth, Sally Blane, and George Y. Harvey. Other features include "Our Roosevelt," a screen novelty; "Ko Ko Hops Off"; and current news events.

JUDGE ORDERS CROWD FROM COURT ROOM

A roomful of spectators in Superior Judge Roche's court where Jackson Swisher went on trial as a result of the now famous jazz-and-gin party in a Mason street hotel were all primed for shocks due to notice being repeatedly served in court by defense attorneys that much "mud would be thrown."

The shock, and it was a terrible one to the 200 odd men and women there, came about 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

It was after a full jury of five women and seven men had been drawn in a hasty attempt to ascertain whether Swisher did or didn't do what Sally Whitcomb complains he most certainly did, in a downtown hotel in San Francisco, Sunday, December 11.

Judge Michael J. Roche, with a cold, impassioned eye fixed on the anxious seat-warmers before him, ordered everyone present to leave the courtroom.

The show could go on, the actors and actresses might tell their contradictory parts, Sally arm-in-arm with the young oil salesman, might be traced down the path of rum and roistering romance, but this was to be the public's only shock—barred from the courtroom.

They filed out, of course, thankful for at least two things. They had one snicker during the day, and one short glimpse of the leading lady, the slim, bouquet-laden Sally. They hung around a bit for another glimpse, but Sally sat in her room across the hall, and two policemen shooed the loiterers out of the Hall of Justice. They were gloomy.

So was Judge Roche, who said: It is a sad state of affairs that people must hang here all day simply to listen to this case. And Sally, anxious as ever, still did not get her chance to re-tell her story. She will, Monday morning, when the trial re-opens at ten o'clock.

If Edward A. Cunha, who with Attorney Harry I. Stafford is defending Swisher from the attack charge, hadn't talked so long in his opening address, Sally might have gone on. Told that the full jury and one additional man in case "anything happens" had been chosen, she powdered her face. Coat held snugly about her slim self, she stood in the hallway, waiting and waiting.

"So they chased them out, did they?" Makes no difference to me, I'm ready."

So was the jury, apparently. Its early members had sat there, some of them for two days, some for one, trying to look not too bored, nor too interested.

DRIVE TO CURB POWER TRUST

WASHINGTON, March 9. — A new drive to curb the activities of the power trust lobby which is seeking to thwart passage of the Norris resolution for government operation of the $100,000,000 Muscle Shoals hydroelectric development got under way today.

Following yesterday's speech by Senator La Follette of Wisconsin, in which he served warning on the power trust's friends in the Senate that they would be required to private life, a movement was planned today to make a new demand for a Congressional investigation of the lobby.

Senator La Follette was among the senators who promised to conduct a bitter fight against the agents of the electric monopoly who are now described as very active in Washington.

The menace of the power trust, in his judgment, even greater than of oil. It appears that just now we have an infamous example of the lengths to which organized wealth will go in its greed for more riches and power.

He was speaking of the developments by the Senate Teapot Dome investigating committee which has found that large blocks of stock of the $3,000,000 Liberty Bond Teapot Dome slash fund went to pay off the deficit left by the Republican National Committee's 1929 political campaign.

figures show that the most of the successful men in the army, navy and air force have been married at ages much later than thirty. This also holds true for the ministry, where the leading church figures of England have been somewhat tardy in their devotions to the fair sex.

On the other hand, youthful marriages predominate in the fields of letters, jurisprudence and politics. This is especially true in the political field where the two leading figures of the present day in England have married young. Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin, head of the present Conservative Government, was married at the rather early age of twenty-five, and Mrs. Baldwin quite frequently sings her praises of Prime Minister Stanley through the columns of the public press.

David Lloyd George, the war time prime minister and present "Emperor" of the English Liberal party, also married young, his age at the time being twenty-five. Ramsay proved a noted exception to this rule, getting married when well past forty.

Among the church figures in England, the Archbishop of Canterbury seems to head the list as the youngest, having married at the age of thirty. Dean Inge, of St. Paul's married at the more mature age of forty-five, while Dr. Barnes, the stormy Bishop of Birmingham, was forty-two when married.

Noted figures in the world of warriors—wherein the dispute originally started—include Earl Haig, married at forty-four, or Sir William Robertson, former chief of the Imperial staff, thirty-four, General Sir George Milne, thirty-nine, Sir Ian Hamilton, thirty-four, and Earl Jellicoe, forty-three.

Strong support for early marriages was voiced by the Rev. Basil Bourchier, who declared: "I have always been in favor of early marriage. If a woman married a young man, she married him for better or worse, and is prepared to face any hardships for his sake. Delay till thirty is fraught with all manner of perils."

SUPERVISORS expect to spend $20,000 on Wineville-Chico highway.

TENNIS CLUB PLAYS MATCH THIS SUNDAY

Plans for both men's and women's tennis tournaments were furthered by members of the Richmond Tennis club at a meeting held last night in the city hall. Bob Radke was named chairman of a committee to arrange for a "B" tournament within the club. The women players decided to schedule matches with teams of Stockton, San Jose, Santa Cruz, and other cities. The first will be played with Stockton, Sunday March 25, on the Richmond courts. Preparing for the matches is a committee consisting of Mrs. Bob Radke, chairman; Mrs. Herbert Hunt, Miss Mary Gately, Miss Helen Gately, Miss Marie Hughes and Miss Beth Woodford.

The men's team will meet the Berkeley Tennis club players tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock in matches to be reeled off on the Berkeley club courts.

Lloyd Moore was named to represent the local club at the annual dinner of the California Lawn Tennis Association, to be held this evening at the Bohemian club, at San Francisco.

Cal. Frosh Win From Richmond

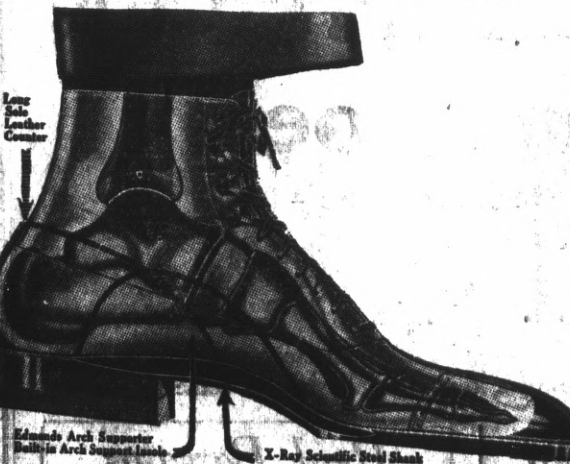

Richmond Union high school's baseball team was unable to put over a single run when they met the California Frosh on the Berkeley diamond, and lost the game by the score of 13 to 0. The Richmond boys had little time to practice since the season opened and they showed their inexperience during the play. Jack Pinto pitched good ball for the loopers, but the lack of batting and fielding practice showed in the work of the rest of the team. California has won five of the ten contests played this season.

Ace Hudkins Life Story

ACE HUDKINS
Told to James W. Jennings
BROTHERS ALL ATHLETES
As athletes we were a lively gang and played in almost all the sports.

I play golf now and when I set out on the course with Leo P. Flynn on the coast when he visits us, I know enough about him to shoo him off when he wants to make "a sociable little bet" just to make the game interesting.

While at school I played left field with Bancroft School baseball team, and my partner at center field was P. Purdy, who is now with Cincinnati. We also played with the All-Stars, a semi-pro team. P. played pro football with the Chicago Cardinals last year.

At Hollywood last summer I managed a team called the Nebraska Wildcats.

Most of the boys I knew or played with at Bancroft School later gained fame at the University of Nebraska, located in our city.

We made the acquaintance of the coaches at the University football squad, the same eleven which trimmed your New York University last year and the year previous.

They would present us with old uniforms, headgear, footballs, and in this ragged rig we represented the school on the gridiron. Jug Brown, Nebraska's captain and quarterback last year, played with me as a kid.

NEWSPAPER SHIN GUARDS
I took more punishment in those games than I ever did in the ring. My crowd, at the north side of the city, were tough and hardy. We had a soccer team, and, though provided with shin guards, never wore them. My outfit would get the most vicious kicks on the shin and laugh 'em off.

What an iron gang, the spectators would say. But we were not as injury-proof as we seemed. Each one of my soccer-ites had newspapers wrapped about his legs and shins under his stockings, and we found them better than he leather or canvas guards the teams usually wore.

I won the all state school championship for the hop, step and jump, and was a member of the all-state 440-yard relay champions.

Playing all the good outdoor sports and training my eyes to perfection at billiards, I was well equipped physically for the toughest game of all, boxing.

The provincial customers will be given plenty of opportunity to look at the thumping Yankees this year; for your old pal Ed. Barrow has fixed up an elaborate exhibition game schedule for the champions as you have ever seen. Evidently Ed figures the Yanks will breeze through the American League campaign as easily this season as they did last, for he has scheduled thirteen games to be sandwiched in on the open dates that bob up in the Yankee schedule.

Just how the news will strike the athletes must still be guessed at, but judged on past performances these exhibition games will be hailed with lingering yawns. The lads don't like 'em, and out of a dozen or so played last year the Yanks won only one—and that because the Babe couldn't stand it any longer and clouted one over the fence in the last inning.

On Sunday, April 15, the Hugmen will play the Orioles at Baltimore. They just have to go there every year, for Baltimore will always clamor for a look at its most illustrious son, the Babe. A couple of weeks later the Yanks will play the Red Sox at Boston. The Babe, who was a visitor to the Yankee offices yesterday and who copped the award in 1923, wanted to know if that $1000 purse, which is a feature of the award introduced for the first time in 1926, wasn't "retroactive." All the Babe got in 1923 was the diploma. Now he'd like to get the thousand bucks.

Jack Claims Heeney Held In Clinches

By MICHAEL W. CASALE

Gloom was written all over the dressing room of Jack Delaney after the smoke of battle had cleared at the Garden, in New York. Delaney, Pete Rilly and Joe Jacobs all expressed amazement at the decision, which was rendered in favor of Tom Heeney, the rough, tough, two-fisted New Zealander.

"I thought I won the fight," were the first words uttered by Delaney.

"At no time during the battle was I hurt by Heeney. I pulled up in splendid condition and I could have gone fifteen more rounds.

"Probably the holding on gag served to lick me. But this is an injustice to me. Heeney made it look as if I was holding, but he was the actual offender. He has a trick way of clinging on and those who were not close up at the ringside failed to see who really was to blame for holding in close quarters.

"It is true I did not use my right hand often, but Heeney was seldom in a position for me to take the chance with anything but my left. I could not leave myself open by throwing right hands at him foolishly.

"I scored effectively with my left hand and I did bring over some hard rights. What did he do? He mauled throughout. And at the finish he was a pretty tired fighter. However, I will try and get a return match, for I am sure I can beat him again."

Pete Rilly then spoke a few words for Delaney.

"Delaney won easily. No question about it. Heeney fouled him in the tenth round. Had Delaney claimed a foul he might have been awarded the decision, who witnessed the scrap from the first row of the ringside section, told Johnny Dundee he thought the decision was just. "It was a great fight, Johnny, and Heeney was entitled to it," said Col. Roosevelt.

Ed Sullivan's SPORT WHIRL

WILL THE BABE RUN LOU-LOU RAGGED?

"He's a tough guy to follow!" Many a Joe Zille has lamented in that fashion after a Will Mahoney or a Joe Cook had left the audience prostrate in the aisles. And it may be that Columbia Lou Gehrig, who used to be a home run buster himself, will find that a useful line to pop during the impending American League race.

Just how tough it really is to follow the Babe Gehrig discovered in the closing weeks of last season. Baseball's Head Man stepped out and left his young teammate behind while he went on to a new home run record.

The Babe just naturally went into his dance, and when he had finished Gehrig knew all the sadness that the Zilleches of the past have put into those cruel, cruel words:—

"He's a tough guy to follow!"

If the Babe was a tough guy to follow last year, one suspects it might be a whole lot tougher this season. They never were the same after Dempsey got through with them, and Man o' War ran many a good thoroughbred into retirement.

It's a way great champions have, and the manner in which the Babe came from behind last season to pull up again at the head of the home run parade may have left Gehrig just a wee bit limper than any one ever supposed.

The Gorgeous Georges Carpentier, who was a real good fighter, ran second ever after Dempsey flattened him. Firpo took the first beat he could see back to the Argentine after he got up off the Paley Grounds canvas. Tom Gibbons, Bill Brennan, Fred Gilton and a lot of others were quite neatly washed up after the Manassa Mauler got through mauling them. They were never the same.

MAN O' WAR RAN HEART OUT OF JOHN P. GRIER
H. P. Whitney thought he had a great horse in John P. Grier until Man o' War ran him into the ground and broke his heart one thrilling day at Aqueduct. After running like a team until they reached the stretch, Man o' War responded to Kummer's whip in such fashion that John P. Grier looked as though he had suddenly picked up a laundry wagon along the route, and Man o' War thundered home to win by two lengths.

The Whitney colt never amounted to anything after that, and even proved a disappointment in the stud.

Commodore J. K. L. Ross had the courage and confidence to match his Sir Barton with Man o' War at Kenilworth, Canada, with the same sad result. It was no contest, and Sir Barton, I believe, never won another race.

It was a great race Babe and Lou put on through most of last season, but it was another no contest after the Babe settled down to serious plunking. After jockeying back and forth for three-quarters of the season, Gehrig dropped off so suddenly that one wonders if the Babe implanted the reality of it all so deeply in his young teammate that Gehrig like Man o' War's opponents, and like Dempsey's, will never be the same.

GEHRIG IS BABE'S PROTEGE INSTEAD OF RIVAL
In addition to whatever qualities of skill the Babe may have over Gehrig in the technique of fence busting, he also has the psychological edge. As he is a person of guileless mental processes, with nothing of what has often been referred to as chicanery in his make-up, he has brought about this condition quite unknowingly. Still, it exists just the same.

In their journeys together the Babe has ever pushed Lu-Lu to the front. At dinners and on all public occasions the Babe has been generous to a fault in his praise of the young man who aspires to supplant him as home run king.

"If any one is going to finish ahead of me in home run hitting, it's young Lou Gehrig," the Babe has said time after time, and then gone on to elaborate upon Lou's many virtues.

Surely, Lu-Lu must feel a deep debt of gratitude for all of this kindly encouragement and boosting, and gratitude, they say, is a slave virtue. One doesn't feel quite right about beating out a guy who has been his little pal.

HOW DEMPSEY DOTTED SHARKEY'S EVIL EYE
Dempsey, a little wiser in the tricks of sport than the Babe, effected such a coup on Jack Sharkey when they signed for their fight in New York. The Boston Gob, meeting him in Rickard's office for the signing, had been rehearsing that Evil Eye state of his for fifteen minutes before Jack appeared. When the ex-champ did breeze in he beat the gob to it by smilingly walking over to him, extending his hand, and saying:—

"Hello, Jack, you're looking fine. How's the family?"

And Sharkey told him how the family was, and thought Dempsey a great guy right up to the time Jack stretched him on the canvas, several weeks later.

Gehrig surely must think the Babe a great guy. As a matter of fact, every one else thinks so, but Lou knows it's a little more intimately. He also knows he's a tough guy to follow, and the combination is going to give Gehrig a few mental hazards to leap this season that he didn't have last.

He hit forty-seven homers while the Yankee home run circus was still a race, but for some reason he never did anything startling with that gargantuan willow once the Babe started two-stepping. Maybe the Babe's too tough to follow!

It's tough decision to lose. Joe Jacobs was in no mood to talk, but he did say that Delaney was the victim of a poor decision.

"Delaney was rated perfectly," said Joe. "He was well in hand all the way. I thought he won with something to spare. The decision amazed me."

Col. Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., who witnessed the scrap from the first row of the ringside section, told Johnny Dundee he

STANDARD OIL SHOWS CUT IN 1927 PROFITS

15, making a total dividend for the year of $2.62½ a share, as related to a net profit of $3.19 a share.

The non operating income for 1927 was $5,725,917 less than for the year 1926, due principally to the fact that in 1926 certain large non-operating incomes in the form of profits on securities and liquidating dividends were made in connection with the consolidation with the Pacific Oil Company and the purchase of the Pacific Gasoline Company. President Kingsbury's annual report said:

"Conditions in the oil industry were far from normal during the year, yet general business conditions on the Pacific Coast were good. There was a normal increase in the consumption of petroleum products, and the prospects for the continuance of this normal increase during the coming year are favorable."

While a study of statistics for 1927 indicates a draft of about 8,000,000 barrels of oil from storage on the Pacific Coast, it should be borne in mind that during the year there was in California an average production of about 77,000 barrels in stocks instead of a decrease of 8,000,000 barrels. The company's proportion of this cut in production averaged 23,000 barrels per day throughout the year.

"The net production of the company and its subsidiaries for 1927 was 53,670,274 barrels, or 147,042 barrels daily, as against a production, including subsidiaries, of 142,636 barrels daily in 1926, an increase of 4406 barrels daily. This increase was due primarily to the development of the company's holdings in the Yates pool in West Texas."
